7. Suitability of Product for Client

Warning

Many derivatives are complex and high-risk financial products that are not suitable for most retail investors. If you do not understand a derivative described in this document and the risks associated with it, you should not enter into it. You can also seek advice from a financial adviser to help you make your decision. You should ask if that adviser has experience with these types of derivatives. You are strongly advised to give us information to determine your suitability to trade derivatives. If you are not suitable to trade derivatives, you may risk exposing yourself to risks that fall outside your knowledge and experience and you may not have the knowledge or experience to properly assess or mitigate the effects of the derivative. Without the information from you, there is a strong risk that we will not be able to assess whether you have the necessary knowledge and experience to understand the risks involved.

8. Risk Disclosure Statement

Trading in leveraged foreign exchange, CFDs and derivatives is risky and losses can be substantial. The risks stated in this statement are not full and complete and may change. You are recommended to seek professional opinion and carefully decide on whether such trading is suitable for you. Below are some of the risks you should consider.

There is a possibility that you may lose more than your initial deposit due to the elevated level of risks involved.

When trading leveraged products, a large exposure may be taken with a relatively small deposit. This can lead to magnification of losses and you may lose more than your original investment amount.

You may be required to maintain additional funds in your account at short notice due to increased market volatility or other reasons. If you are not able to do so, your positions may be closed out.

There may arise situations where it may be difficult for you to close out your positions. This may be due to high price volatility or a sharp reduction in liquidity.

Stop loss orders are not guaranteed and under certain conditions there may be gapping in prices and such orders may be executed at prices which may differ from the ordered price to a considerable extent.

Trading on-line may be subject to risks associated to using the internet. There may be losses in connectivity or internet failure or connection may be slow or there may be a power outage or equipment failure.

9. Client Acknowledgement and Declaration
